When she is hit by a car, the brilliant and articulate astronomer Anna loses her ability to speak, a condition known as aphasia. What emerges from her mouth is a hodge-podge of unconnected words alternately confusing, funny, original and wise—and sometimes all four. In a series of brief, often comic episodes, the play follows Anna through her illness and ultimate acceptance of herself—a personal triumph, despite a continuing infirmity—and dramatizes the impact of her changed circumstances on her lover, her teen-aged daughter, and her professional life.

Everyone will be touched by the themes this play considers—language, inner and outer space, the challenges of a devastating affliction, the consolation and ordeals of family life and, most of all, the universal hunger and need for communication.

“A moving and poetic experience. Like the sky, it is a play of seemingly infinite depth”
